Law is what both Houses of the National Assembly approve and the President endorses unless this Constitution states otherwise.

In case the President does not agree with a bill passed by the National Assembly, he can send back the bill with justifiable reasons to the Wolesi Jirga within fifteen days of its submission.

With the passage of this period or, in case the Wolesi Jirga approves the bill again with a majority of two-third votes, the bill is considered endorsed and enforceable.

Article Ninety-five

A bill can be initiated by the government, or by members of the National Assembly, or in the domain of the regulation of judicial affairs, through the Supreme Court by the government.

Article Ninety-six

Proposals for budgetary and financial affairs shall be initiated only by the government.

Article Ninety-seven

Bills initiated by the government shall be submitted first to the Wolesi Jirga.

If a bill includes imposition of new taxes or reduction in state incomes, it shall be included in the working agenda of the Wolesi Jirga on the condition that an alternative source is also foreseen.

The Wolesi Jirga approves or rejects as a whole a bill, including proposals for budgetary and financial affairs and the proposals of taking or giving loans.

The Wolesi Jirga cannot delay a bill for more than a month.

The proposed bill is submitted to the Meshrano Jirga, after its approval by the Wolesi Jirga.

The Meshrano Jirga shall decide on the bill within fifteen days

The National Assembly shall give priority to the bills, treaties, and development plans of the government that require urgent consideration and decision at the request of the government.

If a bill is initiated by ten members of one of the two Houses and then approved by one fifth of the members of the respective Houses, it can be admitted to the agenda of the respective Houses.

Article Ninety-eight

The state budget and development plan of the government are submitted through the Meshrano Jirga along with advisory comments to the Wolesi Jirga.

The decision of the Wolesi Jirga, irrespective of the consent of the Meshrano Jirga, is enforceable after it is signed by the President.

If for some reasons the budget is not approved before the beginning of the new fiscal year, the budget of the year before is applied until the new budget is approved.

The government is obligated within the forth quarter of the fiscal year to give to the Wolesi Jirga the budget of the new fiscal year and a brief account of the current year's budget.

The definite account of the previous fiscal year shall be submitted by the government to the Wolesi Jirga within six months of the new year, in accordance with the provisions of the law.

The Wolesi Jirga shall not delay the approval of the budget for more than one month or delay permission to give or take a loan for more than 15 days.

If during this period the Wolesi Jirga does not take any decision with regards to taking or giving loan, the proposal will be considered to be approved.

Article Ninety-nine

If the annual budget or a developmental plan or an issue related to public security, territorial integrity, and the country's independence is under discussion in the National Assembly, the session of the Assembly cannot end before the approval of the matter.

Article One hundred

In case the decision of one House is rejected by another e, a joint committee composed of equal members of each house shall be formed to resolve the differences.

The decision of the committee shall be enforced after its approval by the President. In case the Joint Committee cannot resolve the differences, the bill is considered defeated. However, if the bill was approved by the Wolesi Jirga in the first place, it can be approved in the next session of the Wolesi Jirga by the majority of its members. This approval is assumed as enforceable, after it is signed by the President, without submission to the Meshrano Jirga.

In case the differences between the two Houses are over legislation involving financial affairs, and the joint committee is not able to resolve it, the Wolesi Jirga can approve the bill by the majority vote of its members.

This bill is assumed as enforceable without submission to the Meshrano Jirga after it is signed by the President.

Article One hundred-one

No member of the National Assembly shall be legally prosecuted for expressing his views while performing his duties.

Article One hundred-two

When a member of the National Assembly is accused of a crime, the law enforcement authority informs the House of which the accused is member about the case, and the accused member can be prosecuted.

In case of an evident crime, the law enforcement authority can legally pursue and arrest the accused without the permission of the House, which the accused is a member of.

In both cases, when legal prosecution requires detention of the accused, law enforcement authorities are obligated to inform the respective House about the case immediately.

If the accusation takes place when the National Assembly is in recess, the permission of arrest is obtained from the administrative committee of the respective House and the decision of this committee shall be presented to the first session of that House for a decision.

Article One Hundred three

Ministers can participate in the sessions of each House of the National Assembly. Each House of the National Assembly can demand the participation of Ministers in its session.

Article One Hundred and four

Both Houses of the National Assembly hold their sessions separately at the same time.

Under the following circumstances, both houses can hold joint sessions:

1. When the legislative session or the annual session is inaugurated by the President.
2. When it is deemed necessary by the President.

In this case, the head of the Wolesi Jirga chairs the joint session of the National Assembly.

Article One Hundred and five

The sessions of the National Assembly are open unless the Chairman of the Assembly, or at least ten members of the National Assembly, request that the sessions be secret and the Assembly accepts this request.

No one shall enter the building of the National Assembly by force.

Article One Hundred and six

The quorum of the sessions of each House of the National Assembly for voting is complete with the presence of the majority of the members, and its decisions are taken with the majority of the members present, unless this Constitution states otherwise.

Article One Hundred and seven

The National Assembly convenes for two ordinary sessions each year.

The term of the National Assembly in each year is nine months.

The Assembly can extend this period when necessary.

Extraordinary sessions of the Assembly during recess can take place by the order of the President.

Article One Hundred and eight

In cases of death, resignation and dismissal of a member of the National Assembly, and/or disability or handicap that prevents performance of duties permanently, election shall be held for a new representative for the rest of the legislative period, in accordance with the provision of law.

Matters involving the presence or absence of members of the National Assembly shall be regulated according to the internal regulations of the Assembly.

Article One Hundred and nine

Proposal for amending the electoral law shall not be included in the agenda of the Assembly during the last year of the legislative term.
